2. Reasons for the Differences

KFC's increases in net sales and operating income over the earnings forecast are due mainly to increases in service fees and higher dividend incomes from one of its subsidiaries. However, the company registered a 1,483 million yen decrease in net income, down to negative 983 million yen, as a result of extraordinary losses amounting to 1,666 million yen to account for appraisal losses in the shares of two other subsidiaries.

The current situation is expected to have negligible impact on KFC's consolidated performance.
