

Group Reorganization of the Semiconductor Business (Notice of Agreement for the Merger through Absorption (Simplified Absorption-type Merger) with a Consolidated Subsidiary of Fujitsu Limited)

Tokyo, January 30, 2020 — Fujitsu Limited (herein after referred to as “Fujitsu”) announced a resolution made today at its Board of Directors Meeting to implement a group reorganization (herein after referred to as “the Reorganization”) of the semiconductor business in the Fujitsu Group. This will include an absorption-type merger (herein after referred to as “the Merger”) with Fujitsu being the succeeding company and Fujitsu Semiconductor Limited (hereinafter referred to as “FSL”), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Fujitsu, being the absorbed company, and hereby gives notice to that effect as stated below.

Since this is a simplified absorption-type merger to be implemented between Fujitsu and its wholly-owned subsidiary, certain disclosure items and details have been omitted from this notice.

1. Purpose of the Reorganization

In line with its Management Direction, Fujitsu has advanced the concentration of management resources to Technology Solutions as its core business. On the other hand, regarding the semiconductor business, Fujitsu has built a group structure with FSL managing the entire business to strengthen the company with an independent business.

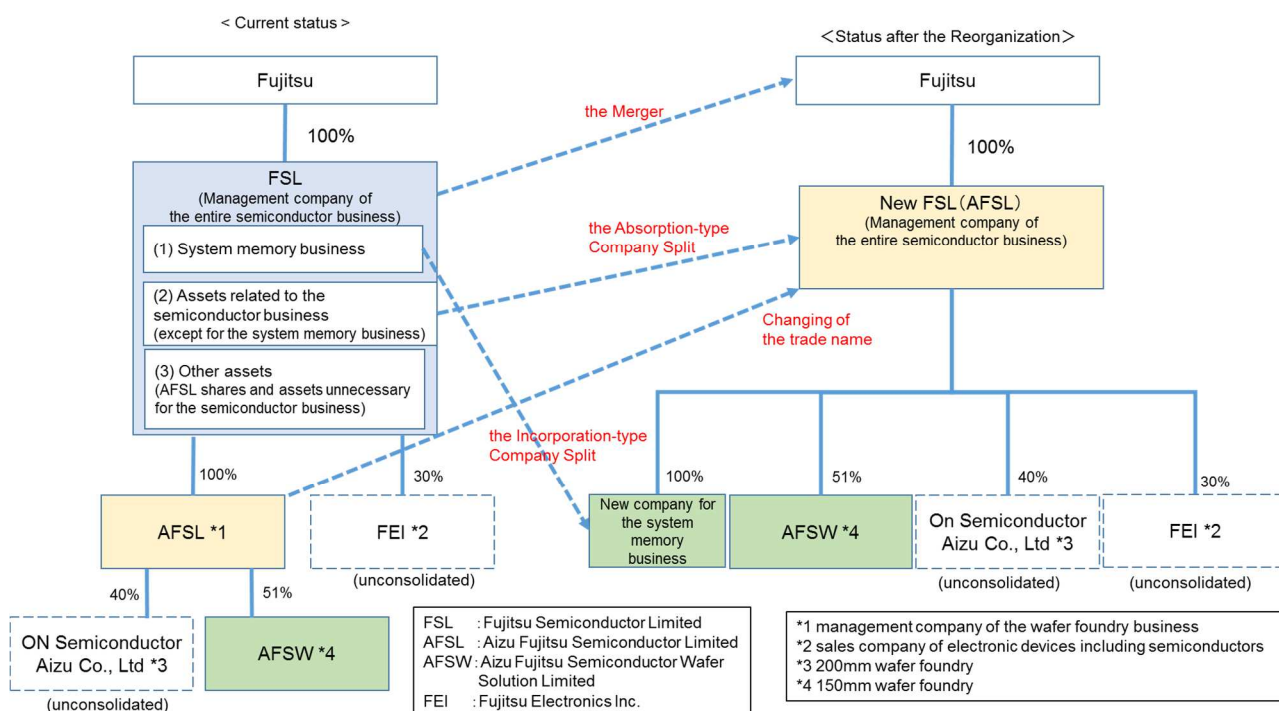

Furthermore, Fujitsu has steadily carried out reforms toward optimal formation through measures related to the FSL Group. These include the separation of Aizu Fujitsu Semiconductor Manufacturing Limited, a 200mm wafer foundry (currently ON Semiconductor Aizu Co., Ltd), and Fujitsu Electronics Inc., a sales company of electronic devices including semiconductors, into unconsolidated companies, as well as the transferring of Mie Fujitsu Semiconductor Limited, a 300mm wafer foundry (currently United Semiconductor Japan Co., Ltd.), to United Microelectronics Corporation in October 2019.

The scale of the semiconductor business has changed considerably from the past through these reforms. Accordingly, Fujitsu has officially decided to implement the reorganization to optimize the scale of FSL to meet the current situation, further strengthening competitiveness, enhancing operational effectiveness and clarifying responsibilities in the 150mm wafer foundry and the system memory business.

<Overview of the Reorganization>

The following changes will take place in order from (1) to (4) on March 31, 2020.

- (1) Split the system memory business of FSL through a company split (incorporation-type company split) (herein after referred to as “the Incorporation-type Company Split”) to accelerate the decision-making process and clarify responsibilities in the system memory business.
- (2) Transfer the assets related to the semiconductor business, owned by FSL, to Aizu Fujitsu Semiconductor Limited (hereinafter referred to as “AFSL”) through a company split (absorption-type company split) (herein after referred to as “the Absorption-type Company Split”) to concentrate management resources of the semiconductor business to AFSL.
- (3) Conduct an absorption-type merger with Fujitsu being the surviving company and FSL being the absorbed company to integrate AFSL shares and assets unnecessary for the semiconductor business, both of which have been possessed by FSL, into Fujitsu (the Merger).
- (4) Change the trade name of AFSL to Fujitsu Semiconductor Limited, which will manage the entire semiconductor business as the new FSL that is optimized to meet the current scale of the semiconductor business.
